Process Analysis Essay Sample

Process analysis essays are used to explain how to do something or to explain how a process works. These are expository essays that teach you how to do something or understand the workings of something. When writing a process analysis essay that gives details or explains, your purpose is to tell how something is done, how something works, how something was done, or how something is done.

A process analysis essay explains a series of events. Other expository analysis essays are organized chronologically so that readers can follow a set of steps. To write a knowledge analysis essay, you need to explain the steps involved in a process, how they fit to one another and how they jump to the end point. The steps below will guide you in processing and explaining a complex process that is difficult and usually requires the reader to pay attention.

Step 1
Choose a topic. This means you need to think of a subject and topic. You have to decide whether to explain an event or thing or a list of steps. It is better to write a process analysis essay that is a list of steps or a list of steps. If you get an opportunity that is a comparison, there may be too many steps involved and your reader might get confused. If you must choose a broader approach, compare the steps involved so that the reader can easily understand everything.

Step 2
Before the impact that you've made. Decide what you feel is important to tell the reader and how you will do it. This will help you work on the essay.

Step 3
Decide on the steps you will use to explain and explain how to do it clearly. Write the steps.

Step 4

The Steps to Persuasive Writing

Step 1
Introduce the main topic clearly. Organize your main ideas.

Step 2
Present supporting facts and details. Use logical reasoning.

Step 3
Use persuasive words (for example, as a result, for this reason, etc.) to link reasons or details to each other or the main idea.

Step 4
Provide a clear and relevant conclusion.

Goal: The purpose of persuasive writing is to convince the reader to do something. Persuasive writing should appeal to the reader's emotions.

Argumentative Writing

Computer games have not only caught the attention of Mass Media and nowadays every channel considers it a duty to report games but have also managed to change the way we play and think. The increasing amount of games with violent content took the society and makes a very aware of them. It is already common knowledge that violent games cause violence in people. This is not true. It is not caused by the images of people. Every other person says that the reason for it is games being too close to reality. The opinion that games cause violence is a common opinion but it is not true. It is not caused by the images of people. It is caused by the violence and the act of violence by itself is a consequence. And can we blame violence on the reality of a game? Is the behavior of the definition of 'violence' with all its possibilities to be used as a justification for the violence in the real world?

Games originally are entertainment. Contemporary games are very realistic and for this reason they are a source of great enjoyment for the player and developer. Games are entertainment and more than that, in addition, the statistics of the New York University led by Green and Bavelier claim that the player performing action games get an improvement of some types of brain activity, related to processing of visual information. In particular, some player cope with problems of visual information by using more moving objects at the average level of 20% better than people who do not play action computer video games. The 'violent' violent behavior is not caused by the images of people. It is caused by the possibility to become a person who is to be and to act in the outside world for some time. But what if a person gets an instruction to play a game that is to be and to act in the outside world for some time. It is a game that the player can become violent. Let us stop for a moment right at this point. Those who do not participate in the type of activity usually make the conclusion of presence of violence in the game world.

Conclusion: Nobody will ever hear the kind of statement from those who play. From those who play the role of the game and understand that it is just a virtual world. A psychologically healthy person will never continue to play a game that is to be and to act in the outside world for some time. It is a game that the player can become violent. Let us stop for a moment right at this point. Those who do not participate in the type of activity usually make the conclusion of presence of violence in the game world.

These images represented by themselves are not simple objects. A game may potentially give the opportunity to 'become the obstacle' that may not be destroyed according to the rules but it is a more and more personal choice whether to do it or not. This leads to the conclusion that violence is a consequence but the cause. People who are originally prone to violence may get an interest by games and continue violence in the 'real world'. But in this case violence in games is a small justification of the violent nature of the player.
